

Project Corporate Video Conferencing

The project vConf - Corporate video conferencing software aims to develop a corporate video conferencing software for personal computers with Linux operating system that supports both SIP and RTP as well as H.264 video encoding, among other technologies for video conferencing. This software will use pre-existing libraries to perform the functionalities, thus defining an API for the development of their software.

<HR>